

Klettersteig climbing trail 2,929 m

The frequently climbed Flimspitze with its striking summit cross can now be reached even more easily from the Flimjochbahn top station (Idjochbahn top station) and the Flimsattelbahn top station, thanks to the new climbing trail.

At a height of nearly 3,000 metres above sea level, the Flimspitze is the highest elevation in the area. The 360° view from the rocky, exposed peak is stunning!

The round tour starting from the Flimjochbahn top station with a relatively short access path to the rope route seems especially worthwhile. The rope route with a continuous steel safety rope leads all the way up to the Flimspitze summit. From there you descend over an easy ordinary path north up to an anticline and then head in a western direction via a well-developed and marked trail back to Idalpe.

Generally no self securings are required for sure-footed walkers free of giddiness, however, we recommend a short safety rope for children and unsteady climbers.

Level of difficulty: A = easy (short stretches medium difficulty= B)

Route length / time required: 200 m safe ascend,
120 metres in altitude,
20 – 25 minutes

Gear: for children and unsteady climbers basic climbing equipment is required

Route: from the Flimjochbahn station, head northwards on a marked route. After about 400 m, turn off to the right and continue until you are beneath the distinctive rock plateau and reach the start. Cross the sloping plateau until you are almost below the ridge. Follow the exposed ridge along on the south side and cross easy terrain to the summit.
